

Spring Fever Unleashed... Managing Your Pet's Seasonal Woes

How to Manage Seasonal Woes

With warmer weather just around the corner, now is the best time to take preventative measures against common complaints experienced among pets and owners alike...

From aggravated allergies to prickly paws, more time spent outdoors can contribute to seasonal symptoms that can affect your pet's overall health. Many pets experience disturbances in behavior, skin, and digestive health with increased exposure to grass, insects, and other factors. It is very important to monitor and address these issues, as they can develop into a number of other health-related consequences if left untreated.

Perhaps you've endured your own share of wheezing and sneezing on behalf of keeping Fluffy and Fido in your home. According to numerous studies, approximately 15% of the population is allergic to pets. However, there is no reason to suffer in silence from common animal allergens.

In addition to caring for seasonal disturbances in you and your pet, there are also other cautions to watch out for in and around your house. Hidden dangers can present themselves when we least expect them, so taking a few precautionary steps can help prevent mishaps.

Read on for some great tips and information on keeping your pet healthy!

Pet Ticks, Fleas and Stings

Unforeseen Dangers of Spring

With warmer spring weather arriving in the next few weeks, pet owners face an entire new set of challenges. While your pet was likely cooped up inside during the winter, the change in climate will soon likely bring your pet outdoors—also exposing it to potential health hazards.

Nearly every system in your pet's body can be affected by the change in season, but preventative measures can be taken to ensure your pet stays safe and healthy while frolicking in the great outdoors!

When unleashing your pet into the yard, park, or other place of recreation, be sure to err on the side of caution regarding the territory they investigate. Puppies especially tend to mistake blooms, leaves, and branches as potential chew toys, which can disrupt digestive systems or even be poisonous.

To settle sensitive stomachs and restore health after a slip-up, try a detoxifying supplement or effective natural tonic to support liver health. Natural remedies to promote digestive health and balance can go a long way in avoiding digestive upsets in the first place.

The abundance of fresh foliage also brings the additional threat of infection-transmitting insects, as well as an increased likelihood of scrapes and cuts from thorns and rough edges.

It is important to protect your pet against fleas and ticks and relieve bites from existing buggers promptly to lessen the risk of serious complications. To soothe, heal, and help prevent infection from minor bruises and sores, attend to your pet promptly. Check their paws after a walk or excursion for embedded rocks, stones, or other elements that could cause distress if ignored.

Building a strong and healthy skin and coat can help promote the natural immune response of the skin when injured to protect against problems.

In addition to these ailments more likely to affect animals, pets experience many similar conditions as us when we warm weather arrives, as well.

Allergies and behavior issues can emerge as spring fever hits, causing upset for both your pet and you! To help promote healthy respiratory health in your pet, take note of identifying allergy triggers, and try to lessen your pet's interaction with these sources. Easing your pet's discomfort can help avoid potential flare-ups of disobedience and aggression.

While heat may be the culprit as instinct interferes with training, sometimes animals react negatively to these controllable ailments. Either way, settling nerves before the onset of extreme summer heat can minimize potentially more destructive behaviors to come.

It is also possible that the added activity with more outdoor play can be contributing to increased muscle and joint pain, which may be exhibited by a disruptive, unusual demeanor.

The following herbal products are very effective in promoting protection and relief from common complaints.

- Digestive Support™ - Treat digestive conditions and improve digestive functioning
- DetoxPlus™ - Cleanse the system and eliminate toxins from the body
- LiverAid™ - Stimulate and improve liver functioning and prevents disease

Is Your Pet Causing Your Wheezing?

Don't Let Allergies Ruin Your Relationship

We all know allergies run rampant as spring approaches, for pets as well as their owners. But there is one allergy most dog and cat owners do not want to think of – a dreaded allergy to their beloved Fido or Fluffy.

According to numerous studies, approximately 15% of the population is allergic to pets. These allergies can range from mild to very severe reactions. It is an immune system response to the allergens released by a certain animal's saliva, urine, and dander. And depending on the severity, pet owners have to make a decision on whether they treat their allergy symptoms or remove the pet from their home.

Studies have shown that adults who developed an allergy to their cat or dog not only kept their pet, but obtained a new one after the previous one died. This shows that for many people, (1 out of 5) the benefits of pet companionship vastly outweighed the setbacks of pet allergies they had to put up with.

Asthma is one condition commonly triggered by animal allergens. Depending on the animal, the allergens are different. Cats' saliva, hair, and dander often cause allergies, while dogs have more

- irritation
- FleaDerm™ - Relieve irritation and itching due to flea and tick bites
- Muscle and Joint Support™ - Relieve stiffness in swollen joints, reduce pain and promote healthy muscles and bones
- PawPaw™ - Protect and encourage healing of paws
- TF-Defense™ - Treat Lyme Disease and other tick-borne illnesses

Other common conditions that can be caused by pet allergies include:

- Hay fever or allergic rhinitis, where airborne dander or other byproducts of animals enters the respiratory passages, causing sneezing, congestion, a runny (or conversely) blocked nose, coughing, wheezing, and itchy and/or watery eyes.
- Redness, itching, or a rash on the skin after even brief exposure, lasting for sometimes hours after contact.

However, you may not be forced to find a new home for your beloved family member just yet. Sometimes more aggressive cleaning and incorporating new lifestyle changes can adapt your home into a healthy, happy coexisting environment for both of you!

10 Tips for Getting Rid of Pet Allergies Instead of Your Pet

1. Keep the pet out of the bedroom. We spend many hours in the bedroom sleeping, so by keeping the pet out of this room, exposure to allergens will be reduced significantly.
2. Grooming is key. The animal should be bathed weekly in order to reduce the amount of allergens it releases out into your home environment.
3. Since animal hair is a common culprit of allergies, the pet should be brushed on a regular basis by a member of the family who is not allergic.
4. The animal's litter box or cage should also be cleaned by a family member who is not allergic. While hair, dander and saliva are the source of cat allergens, urine is the source of allergens in other common pets, including rabbits, dogs, and hamsters.
5. Allergens tend to accumulate in carpeting, mattresses, and cushions. Allergen particles can even go through fabrics! It is therefore suggested that mattresses and cushions be encased in plastic with a zipper as well as aired out on a regular basis.
6. Vacuuming does not clean the lower levels of carpeting and rugs where allergens and hairs may reside, and therefore will not help allergy problems. So, vacuuming can actually make allergies worse, because it may stir up small allergen particles. Hardwood or tile floors are best to help manage allergies. Wash all area rugs on a regular basis.
7. Bedding and carpeting that has animal dander in it should be disposed of. Some fabrics hold allergens for weeks, months, or in extreme cases, years.

8. Studies have shown that immunotherapy, or methods of stimulating the immune system, will improve but not completely prevent allergic symptoms. Cat and dog allergen immunotherapy works best in cases where the patient has only occasional, unavoidable exposure, rather than in cases where the animal stays in the home all of the time.

9. Home air cleaners are a great idea. They are designed to reduce airborne allergens indoors and may help eliminate pet dander.

10. Natural products like herbal and homeopathic remedies are a good alternative to over-the-counter or prescriptions, antihistamines, or decongestants, which can work but have many additional side effects.

Spring Safety from the Inside Out!

With spring just around the corner, the beginning of more hours of daylight in the next few weeks can bring us closer to our pets and families, as we often carve out a little extra time each day for recreation. To ensure continued health and well being, keep a few tips in mind:

Indoors:

- As the old saying goes, showers bring flowers... so check that your houseplants and flowers aren't poisonous, should your pet nibble on one.
- Make sure to keep all the chocolate bunnies away from the dog. Baker's chocolate is more toxic than milk chocolate, but dogs really should not have any of it!
- Spring cleaning? Home improvement products such as paints and cleaning solvents can be toxic. Carefully check labels and use sparingly around your pet and be sure to safely store all products away from pets and children when not in use.
- Take your pet to the veterinarian for a check-up and to receive any yearly or quarterly vaccinations and medicines.

6) We offer an unconditional One Year Money Back Guarantee.

Outdoors:

- Springtime attracts extra attention to the yard for many home owners, inspiring them to fertilize and use pesticides to promote greener grass and bigger blooms, while discouraging insects. However, be sure to keep animals' exposure to these toxic chemicals to a minimum. Pay particular attention to N-P-K fertilizers (which contain nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium salts), which can lead to gastro-intestinal upset and paw or skin irritation. Also watch out for iron content of more than 1%, which can be fatal if ingested. Be sure to safely store all products away from pets and children when not in use.
- While outdoor playtime is increased, practice safety – protect your dog from traffic by always walking him or her on a leash, and restrict time off the leash to safe areas designated for free roaming.
- Keep an eye on your pet's coat and check regularly for fleas and ticks. Also be careful of mosquitoes, as they can transmit heartworms to your cat or dog, which can be fatal.
- Fishing is a popular recreational activity of choice in springtime weather. However, a relaxing excursion can turn into a hazardous emergency if proper caution is not exercised. Remember to keep all fishing line, hooks, and bait far away from your pet – as hooks can easily catch on the mouth or paws of your pet, and resilient fishing line can become an intestinal blockage requiring surgical removal if ingested.
- In case of an accidental runaway incident of your pet, keep an identification tag on your dog or cat that includes your current phone number.
